

Daily Democrat.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY HARNEY, HUGHES & CO.

Office—79 Third Street, east side, between Market and Jefferson.

TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1862.

Closing and Arrival of the Mails at the Louisville Postoffice.

Eastern, Western and Northern close at 12:30 P.M., and arrive at 1:30 P.M.

South, via L. N. R.R., small office close at 9:00 A.M., the previous evening, close at 6:30 A.M. and arrive at 12:30 P.M.

Mails to Cincinnati, Ohio, close at 9:00 A.M., and arrive at 12:30 P.M.

Local, close at 12:30 P.M. at night and 1:00 P.M., and arrive at 1:30 A.M. and 6:30 P.M.

Western Stage (tri-weekly) close at 12:30 P.M. at night, and arrive at 1:00 A.M. and 6:30 P.M.

Midwest Stage (tri-weekly) leaves Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 1:00 P.M., and arrives at 4:00 P.M.

Eastern Stage close at 8:00 A.M., and arrives at 12:30 P.M. on route when the principal mails close at 12:00 P.M. at night, the way mails close at 9:00 P.M.

CITY NEWS.

Mr. C. O. SMITH is our agent at Versailles, Ky. Persons desiring to subscribe will please call on him.

FOR SALE—Several tons of wooden type and a variety of cuts necessary in a well-appointed job office. Also, a No. 1. Ruggles card cutter, nearly new and in good order. Apply at this office.

The Banquet to Gen. Rousseau at the Galt House Last Night.

The banquet to Brigadier General Lovell H. Rousseau, by his friends and citizens of Louisville, last night, was a brilliant affair. The number who were present gave ample testimony of high appreciation in which the gentleman is held by our people.

They honor him for his patriotism, his energy, for his courage and prompt action when our city and State needed the services of a gallant leader. The General was a member of the State Senate, siding by his counsel the action of that body, when the enemy came upon our borders, threatening and denouncing Kentucky for her loyalty to the Union. He quit the Senate and asked permission to raise a brigade for the defense of the Government. He rallied around him the brave spirits who formed the Louisville Legion, and when Buckner, assisted by the enemies within and without the State, attempted to pounce down upon our lovely city, Gen. Rousseau led his men to meet them and checked the raid by which they sought to make Louisville their head rendezvous in the work of treason. How well the General and his gallant command deserve the gratitude of our people and of the country, their acts upon the battlefield in the thickets of the fight street.

Home on a brief visit, the citizens of Louisville determined to avail themselves of Gen. Rousseau's presence to express their appreciation of him as a man and as a soldier, and tendered him the banquet which came off last night at the Galt House. It was, indeed, a banquet—a gathering of the staunch citizens, who delighted to honor him.

At ten o'clock the guests entered the spacious dining room.

The table was magnificently spread. The bill of fare embraced all the superb dishes we have ever heard of, together with many rare and new ones to us. The wines and champagnes were of the choicest brands. The whole was worthy Cap. Miller, who is thorough in everything, and unsurpassed in the duties of "mine host."

Time wore on while the good things were being discussed, with the pleasant accompaniment of music by the band. Now came the address, full of patriotic sentiment, by the Hon. James Gothic, to Gen. Rousseau. It was listened to with the closest attention. Gen. Rousseau responded in fitting terms, and we shall endeavor to procure his speech, together with Mr. Guthrie's, for publication.

The late hour at which we write will preclude even a synopsis of the time.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

A. B. T. STONE.—The achievements flashes through our land, and challenges the wonder of the world. They will float our flag in glory, until the last day of the captives.

The following regular news were read and responded to:

The Union of the States—made indissoluble by the blood of our martyrs—will be preserved.

The memory of Washington. To be drawn standing.

The memory of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay.

The great bulwark of civil liberty. So long as traitors are allowed to live, the cause of the Union will be safe.

The location of Kentucky will be in arms against them; and so long as the fanatic race who voice at the Capital, and who are in power in the South, are allowed to remain in political appeal to the conservatives.

The President of the United States.—May he have firmness enough to defy the orders which fanaticism would give him, and his life and his country's safety his only aim.

Our good friend, Gen. Rousseau.—With his iron-like hideous head, he was among the foremost to meet it. He rallied his countrymen to repel it from the soil of Kentucky, and has made him still more distinguished. Kentucky views him as a true son of the Union, and we will cherish his name as one of the jewels of the State.

As citizens of Louisville, we cannot forget a moment, when we are told that the slaves of the South were threatened, and his sagacity had provided a means for saving them.

The flag of the Union—Born with the hands of heros, it has been a banner of victory.

